THE SOURCE EVALUATION SOCIETY
IS AN EDUCATIONAL, TECHNICAL, AND PROFESSIONAL SOCIETY
FOR THOSE WHO PERFORM STACK SAMPLING.

The mission of the Source Evaluation Society is to advance the applied sciences relating to source evaluation with respect to air pollution and air pollution control by: (1) promoting the development of concepts and techniques relating to the field; (2) encouraging related professional development and knowledge; and (3) striving to ensure the highest professional standards by its members.

- Developing and disseminating technical information in order to provide a continuing education to stationary source sampling professionals and technicians;
- Developing industry's standards, codes, safety procedures, and operating principles;
- Encouraging the personal and professional development of practicing source samplers and students;
- Fostering the source sampler's skill by means of an exchange of knowledge with his fellows;
- Maintaining a body of current sampling knowledge;
- Assisting in maintenance of a high level of ethical conduct;
- Providing a certification program for the membership;
- Seeking cooperation with other professional organizations.
